We probably want to still hold up for a while. A couple of weeks ago, Mayor McKean, Gwen Maller and I spent about an hour with Matt Lehman explaining how the new statute detrimentally affects all municipalities, but definitely small ones. He said that there will definitely be modifications to what was passed this year, if not big ones, at least some tweaks that will assist cities and towns in crafting ordinances that will follow the statute in final form (there are some real questions of how the presently passed statute will be enforced). He suggested that we continue to do exactly what we used to do until there is a change in the statute where we can better draft an ordinance or until a landlord who actually knows a lot what was passed this year puts up a big stink. He's sure that urban areas will have some of that, but didn't anticipate too much of that in either Berne or Geneva.

Hi Dave,

In May Council meeting we put these ordinance on hold until we had a better understanding for the responsibility of delinquent utilities. You were going to join a webinar and then we were to get these done.

When will we be ready for these?
